Rhesus incompatibilities, blood exchange: Connections and healing possibilities, clarification in a spiritual point of view.

I am Maria Isis, be blessed.

The blood is the carrier of the feelings. The blood is the carrier of the spiritual feelings. The blood animates the body from the soul side.

A freshly born baby gets to know itself, but it has the energetic vibration of the blood of its own circulation, absorbs it.

It was, after all, supplied by the mother with her circulation until the umbilical cord was cut. After that it formed its own circulation.

If this blood is subsequently replaced, an emptiness arises, a disorientation arises. Because the baby does not know itself yet, it is an interruption. It is like a "being separated" from something that has already installed itself in the body, but which it has not yet absorbed from the body, which has not yet become recognizable to the baby.

This emptiness can be a shock. This emptiness can be a disorientation, can have the effect of disorientation. But this emptiness can also feel like you no longer have any grounding.

There is this beautiful saying that you humans have, "The rug is pulled out from under me." It could be like that for a baby like this. As soon as this blood is exchanged, new energies come into this body, new forces. Foreign forces come into this body. And to get to know this body, to become familiar with these forces, to accept these forces, needs very much time!

Often there is also a phase where one does not know yet, will the foreign blood be accepted or not. It is a phase of trepidation. Also there again a phase (yes, how should I say?), a phase of persevering.

Already for an adult person, when she receives a foreign blood transfusion, she is at the mercy of many impressions. She has a lot of information, her system has a lot of information to process, new information that is completely different. You could say: many identities come into this body, because the blood is often not only from one human, but the blood of many humans! A blood bag contains the same blood type, but had been compiled through quite a few different blood samples, blood samplings.

So it is very, very many foreign influences that an adult person must process. And now a small baby, where EVERYTHING is in the new beginning. Where EVERYTHING is still, many is, forming, completing itself, it's a double challenge. So this little body needs so much strength to process these new energies. But the difference is, if it is blood from the mother, then there is a familiarity in the body, then there is less stress on the body because the body can remember.

This is the complement to the question in terms of rhesus babies.
